

Teresa A. Saris, M.D.
St. Davids, PA
Internal Medicine, Preventative Medicine

“Quite a few of my patients had asked me if there was any way I could provide them with more dedicated time, resources and flexibility. Until Total Access Medical, I did not think this was possible. Now, I can again focus on each one of my patients, treating them with complete dedication, compassion and diligence without any distraction. I feel rejuvenated and energized. My passion for medicine and treating patients is back to where it was when I first started practicing.”

A graduate of the University of Pennsylvania and Hahnemann University Medical School and board certified in Internal Medicine, Dr. Saris has been in practice since 1991. In addition to her clinical duties, Dr. Saris has remained active at Hahnemann University serving as a clinical instructor of Internal Medicine since 1993 and as an Alumni board member since 1988. In 2000 she received the Preceptor and Teaching Award from the Medical College of Pennsylvania and Hahnemann University. Since 1999 she has been a member of the Philadelphia Club of Medical Women where she was elected President from 2004-2006. Dr. Saris has remained active in the community speaking about preventative health and important senior health issues. Dr. Saris is on staff at Bryn Mawr, Lanckenau, and Paoli Hospitals.

Education:

The University of Pennsylvania
B.A. Natural Sciences, 1984

Medical School:

Hahnemann University
Medical School, M.D.
1988

Post Graduate Training:

Residency: Hahnemann University –
Internal Medicine, 1991

Board Certification:

American Board of Internal
Medicine; Re-certified in 2001

Faculty of MCP/Hahnemann
University – Clinical Instructor of
Internal Medicine, 2000

Professional Societies:

American College of Physicians

Philadelphia Club of Medical Women

Hahnemann University Alumni
Association

Preceptor Committee of MCP/HU
University

Medical Club of Philadelphia

Hellenic University Club of Philadelphia